From the above facts, and knowing somewhat of the success of other physicians in the treatment of the same diseases, and prompted by a strong desire to benefit my fellow-men, I have been induced to offer to the public this small volume, hoping that, after a careful perusal, it may find some to give me credit at least for an honest purpose in my efforts to show in detail my treatment to others, and thereby save life and much suffering. I am aware that, perhaps, my book may not be found perfect, and that in some instances it may be severely criticised by men of much greater eminence than the author.
